

12 DEC 1970

Press Club President Is Louviere

Vernon Louviere, associate editor of the Nation's Business, was elected president of the National Press Club yesterday.

Louviere was running unopposed, but all other races were contested.

Neil R. Regeimbal, Washington editor of Chilton Publications, was elected vice president. Rupert Welch, assistant editor of Telecommunications Reports was chosen secretary.

Felix Belair Jr. of the New York Times Washington bureau was elected to a third term as treasurer.

The new financial secretary is Clyde La Motte, an environmental and energy columnist.

In a five-way race for the board of governors, the three victors were Sam Fogg, of United Press International, William McGaffin, deputy chief of the Chicago Daily News Washington bureau, and Kenneth Scheibel, a Washington correspondent for several papers.